

THE JAILBREAKERS
The story of the jailbreakers who escaped from the Missouri State Penitentiary in 1934. The story is told in a series of chapters, each of which is a self-contained story. The story is told in a series of chapters, each of which is a self-contained story. The story is told in a series of chapters, each of which is a self-contained story.

"I'll Get My Own Lunch"
Sheriff Miller told "Nemo" that he would bring him a good dinner, but got the reply that the "King of the Jailbreakers" would be out for lunch in 30 minutes. Feeling perfectly satisfied that he had his man in "duress" as long as he cared to keep him, the sheriff left the jail with his deputies and went into the court house. In 15 minutes they were joined by "Nemo," who on no consideration would give a hint as to how he made his escape. "It would not do to have such things generally known," he said.

Teaches Jail Jitsu.
"Nemo" took time to teach the sheriff and his deputies a number of jitsu tricks that would probably come in handy in making arrests. The ease with which he handled his men together with the way he had escaped from the jail led the sheriff to say "the only way any one or two men could take 'Nemo' or hold him after they got him would be to shoot him."

The man was given a letter by the sheriff to add to his collection picked up in practically every city of the country. He was also given a letter and permit by Mayor Harry M. Schriver to stage a public exhibition at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

"Nemo" will let anyone tie and gag him with ropes and chains and then lock him with them in any way desired. He will then jump from the ferry landing into the river and make his escape from his fetters. Either Saturday night or Sunday he will make known at the Water Tower many of the secrets of his trade, but announces there will be nothing said on the jailbreaking.

HEADS OF MUSIC BOOY LAUD CITY
Tri-Cities Music Society for 1934 Convention of Federation of Music Clubs.
National officers of the Federation of Music Clubs, pronounced the tri-city an ideal place for the federation conference, to be held here June 7 to 14, 1934, after looking over the three towns. In talks given last evening at the reception, the visitors at "Allendale," the home of Mrs. Frank Gates Allen in Moline, at whose home the visitors were guests, the great possibilities and facilities for the convention were highly praised.

TWO YALE CREWS BEAT HARVARD'S BOATS ON THAMES
Regatta Course, New London, Conn., June 25.—Yale captured preliminary honors in the annual regatta with Harvard over the historic Thames river course this morning by winning the 2-mile freshman race by one length.

Harvard jumped quickly into the lead, but after three-quarters of a mile the Yale freshmen began to creep up and the last half mile, hitting up a terrific stroke, passed Harvard. Official time: Yale, 10:08 2-5; Harvard, 10:10.

Yale also won the second race, the junior varsity 8-oared crew defeating Harvard by one and a half lengths.
